I've been busy this week with, among other things, trying to find a safe house for Eduardo Huizar outside of Mexico through the Committee to Protect Journalists. But just so I'm clear: Why did it take you ten days to forward a message from someone asking our assistance with saving his life. A period during which you sent or forwarded twenty other e-mails to me?

Kevin Morrissey, my name is name XXXXXXX. I'm co editor for XXXXX in Ciudad Juarez.

Maybe you can remember my in one of your publication from last year in September.

The things over here are getting worse with journalist, and many of my colleges are getting hurt or even kill by what's happening over here.

Yesterday at 2:AM I was assaulted and badly hurt in my house by three person s that wanted money, the only way that the aggressor left me is because I told them that the police man were on the way (I lied to them).

Before the aggressor left they told me that there coming back with AK-47 to kill us because I call the police.

There is the doubt that maybe somebody send them to hurt me and my family for what we have publish in my newspaper, but that's something that I really don't now yet.

The thing here is that, me and another college and the watch guard in my newspaper ask for help to the local police, but they never came to my house to help, even when a told the police operator that the aggressors were coming back with machine guns to kill us.

It was until my college (another reporter) went to look for a convoy of federal police and beg them to come and help me.

But that was two hours after the initial aggression.

Tomorrow my colleges here in Juarez are going to help me to denounce what happen and there's the possibility that there's going to be retaliations against my colleges and me.

I will inform you what happen in the next days with this situation.

Thanks for your support.
